How to open and sign in to Office 2013 using a different account Julian Lindner on "Marvel Avengers Alliance" Julian Lindner, senior vice president of technology and strategy for Xbox One, has his work cut out for him as the company is working to make the Xbox One the best place to play games – whether it's with your friends or strangers. Recently, Julian sat down with ComicBook.com to discuss some of the things he's looking forward to in Marvel Avengers Alliance, the game that was announced at the Game Informer Spring Showcase and released earlier this month. "In our studio, we're pretty hardcore gamers," he said. "We have crazy fans at Microsoft and on the Xbox One, and they're just as passionate as any gamers we have in our hardcore gamer studios, so they really get that sense of discovery, and they really get what we're bringing to the gamer community." It's like the old Choose Your Own Adventure books, but with action figures "It's a social game that's designed to be played with friends, and the thing that we're focused on is a game that's very approachable for new users to really understand why this social experience is something that really matters, and something that is going to be enjoyed by millions of people around the world." That kind of describes the premise of Avengers Alliance, as well as the way the game was designed to play. You can pick your favorite Avenger, or even customize your own, and get out into the world to carry out your missions – in this case, stopping bad guys from meddling with your favorite heroes and stopping them from taking over the world. "The big idea is that all the characters are moving around and when you're fighting a villain, you're going to be fighting a minion or a helper or a good guy. And it's like the old Choose Your Own Adventure books, but with action figures." Whether it's a character you love or hate, the fun of the game lies in the exploration and the sharing of your successes with your friends. It's all about sharing the journey. "We really want to make it so people can play the game with their friends 82157476af
